Who dat down in New Orleans?

Ashton Kutcher and Mila Kunis caught a flight from New Orleans to Los Angeles on Saturday, after spending time touring the Big Easy.

Wearing his signature baseball cap and plaid shirt, Kutcher led the way as fiancée Kunis, in a striped top, casual pants and sunglasses, followed close behind. After keeping her baby belly under wraps during the premiere of her new movie Jupiter Ascending, the mom-to-be's bump was clearly visible.

On Friday, the couple – who are expecting their first child later this year – paid a visit to Abita Beer's local brewery. Along the way, Kutcher, cup in hand, cuddled Kunis close for a group photo.

"You never know who you'll run into at an Abita tour!" the company posted to their Twitter account.

Before heading back to L.A., the parents-to-be enjoyed another low-key date, this time at the Slidell Waffle House. They dined with Kutcher's sister, Taushaon, on eggs cooked over-easy, coffee and orange juice.

"We were shocked to have two celebrities walk into our restaurant," Assistant Manager Justin Greene tells PEOPLE, describing the couple as "normal, calm and relaxed."

Adds Greene: "Everyone was like, 'Oh my God. Oh my God.'"
